in patients with liver cirrhosis. The impact of different degrees of liver dysfunction on oxygen delivery is not clear. We investigated the relationship between blood oxygen pressure and regional oxygen saturation (rSO(2)) measured by near-infrared spectroscopy (NIRS) in cirrhotic patients. Thirteen patients (nine with ascites, four with cirrhosis) were enrolled. The lower abdomen of the patients was shaved, and rSO(2) was measured by NIRS. On the right hepatic vein, the occluded hepatic vein was detected, and the oxygen saturation of the remaining hepatic vein (rSO(2)) was measured. The blood pressure, heart rate, peripheral oxygen saturation and the levels of haemoglobin, haematocrit, platelet count and fibrinogen were also measured. These parameters were compared with those obtained from 11 healthy volunteers. The mean (SD) age of the patients was 63.2 (10.8) years, and seven were male.
The mean (SD) venous oxygen saturation was 72.7 (11.8)%, compared with 90.7 (1.2)% in the
