name for the 3-D window which is provided with this product. Although, the name of the item itself is a bit misleading because the technology used to produce this type of glass window is more like a 3-D printer than an eraser. If you've never used the 3-D printer, chances are you probably don't know exactly how it works. However, what you may want to know is that the 3-D glass technology employed by the 3-D Glass Vacuum is fairly similar to the type of technology used by 3-D printers. It simply involves the laying down of layers of glass to produce a 3-D item. A simple example would be the production of an object called a cube. The layers of glass are simply laid down and then bonded together. In this manner, the 3-D Glass Vacuum can produce as much as 16 layers of glass in one hour. Each layer creates a flat surface, much like a sheet of glass. What makes 3-D Glass different from many of the other types of glass windows available is that it can produce as many as 16 different layers of glass in one hour. This means that one hour will produce a window with 12 separate flat surfaces, each at different angles. You'll no doubt wonder, "What is the point of such an hourglass shaped window?”, or, “Why would you need more than six of these surfaces?” The answer to the first question is that it allows people to see details that the flat surface of the regular window does not display, so it’s more like a high-quality telescope. That’s why the 3-D Glass Vacuum window is so much better than the regular type of window. The 3-D Glass Vacuum can be used to create windows that have a lot of angles. If you look at the left side of the 3-D Glass Vacuum, you’ll see that it has a lot of angles as well. This is because there is a lot of stacking involved with this technology.
