In most clinical practice the indication to treat carotid artery stenosis is basically based on a common clinical practice: severe stenosis is treated with carotid endarterectomy (CEA) while moderate stenosis is treated with carotid stenting (CAS). We designed the study to assess whether or not patients with moderate carotid stenosis treated with CEA or CAS have different clinical features. From January 2007 to October 2008 a total of 170 consecutive patients with symptomatic (n = 98) or asymptomatic (n = 72) carotid stenosis underwent carotid revascularization. Based on the results of the diagnostic tests, carotid stenosis was moderate (55-70%) in 85 and severe (70-100%) in 75 patients. Carotid stenosis was treated with CEA in 101 patients (58%) and with CAS in 69 patients (42%). CEA was performed in 65 patients (63%) with moderate stenosis and CAS in 36 patients (43%) with moderate stenosis. Twenty-four patients (12%) had no symptoms, while 136 patients (72%) had ipsilateral (63%) or contralateral (73%) symptoms. During the follow-up (median: 18.2 months), stroke occurred in 8 patients (5%), ipsilateral in 5 patients (4%) and contralateral in 3 patients (4%). Six patients (3%) died. By multivariate analysis, CAS treatment was significantly associated with a lower risk of stroke (p = 0.012), stroke or death (p = 0.011) and target-brachial index reduction (p = 0.013), while absence of ipsilateral symptoms was associated with higher risk of stroke (p = 0.04). The observed difference in clinical outcome between CAS and CEA

[Hedgehog]. Sonic 06 Xbox 360..Q: Is there a way to actually control the bullet movement on a string-trackpad in movement-mode? So, I don't know if this is possible, but I can't find a way on how to do it. When I move the trackpad in d-pad mode, nothing happens. When I move it in movement-mode, the bullet isn't controlled, but I can still move it around. Is there any way to control the bullet movement in movement-mode or am I just doing something wrong? A: I've just tested this and found that I wasn't able to do anything more than moving the cursor left and right. But I can't find anything in the wiki to corroborate this.

Abstract The properties of fossilized bone can be affected by various processes, e.g. crushing, basking or incorporation in a host rock and these changes are registered by microstructural features in the sample (collections of, e.g., broken bones), usually of a microscopic scale. These microstructural differences can be recorded in a number of ways, e.g. in the form of cut marks on the bone, bone remodeling and/or sampling of different geologic horizons. The various recording techniques can then be combined in a process where selected bone microstructural features provide information regarding the provenance of the bone and thus its association with a certain past life and/or provenance of a species. The applied recording techniques can yield reliable information, and possibly even a three-dimensional picture of past activity in order to determine past habits of a species, e.g. habits of use of a cave or use of the sea floor. The aim of this thesis is to investigate the various possibilities to record and interpret bone microstructural changes, on an animal level, in the context of fossilization studies./** *
