Once upon a time, in a far off land not far from here in central China, there lived a humble peasant named Zhu Hong Zhou. He was a moral and just man, though not the best in the village. He struggled to provide for his wife and growing family, yet toiling under a feudal system that was on the verge of collapse. A full month remained between the end of the farming year and the start of the harvesting season. On a clear, moonless night, Zhu Hong Zhou took his large family out into the vast fields to help work in the harvest. Together they sowed the seeds, protected them from wind, watered them, and weeded between rows. They worked all night long, stopping only when the sun rose in the east. As the sun set in the west, Zhu Hong Zhou descended into a deep sleep from which he would not awaken for three days. When he finally returned to consciousness, he was surprised to find that everything was normal in the village. There were no signs of war, famine, or drought. The sun was already high in the sky, and the people were preparing for the next day’s work. A group of children had been playing near the entrance to the village. One of them, a boy named Jing, was about to return to the village when Zhu Hong Zhou called out his name. When he turned, he saw Zhu Hong Zhou standing close to him. “What are you doing, Zhou?” he asked. Zhu Hong Zhou said, “The fresh, growing grass that sprouted after I slept is ready to be harvested.” Zhu Hong Zhou paused for a moment to take in the beauty of his surroundings. Then he continued: “Jing, would you like to leave the village and follow me? We could live in the grass for the entire summer. When the snow hits the ground, we’ll return to the village, pick up the winter harvest, and continue working for the villagers. “Jing, do you like that idea?” Jing thought for a moment. He did not like it, and did not want to leave his family. “Jing, you have to make a choice.” Zhu Hong Zhou said. “The only way we can live in the grass is by your decision. Jing thought long and hard. In the end, he said, “
