gpsxproject a disclaimer to this, I doubt if anyone will be able to help you, best of luck though. gpsxproject no for those projects. If the project is used for research or education they can't be used without the source code, so if you want to run the project, it'll be your responsibility to spend a lot of time learning it and to compile it on your own. We distribute gpsxhydromantiscrack as an installer for Run Software Linux. It's just a "vanilla" install of that system, so if you're not familiar with Linux and you don't know how to use the terminal and build sources, then it's not a piece of cake. A discussion about that can be found here: That being said, we're a bit short on time with the current release as we have to submit to the DSA soon. If someone wants to help us get things up and running for this release, then it's no problem. We have the full source code and can upload it to the DSA and that's the end of it. We're extremely sorry for this inconvenience. Normally, I would request a day or two off to help you with the installation process, but we already have our second priority item on our plate, so we won't be able to do that. I'm sorry for that. I'll tell you this, once we're finished in our current priorities, we're having the source code distributed and we'll work on things like this. We've already got it going on our own. It's basically a matter of time now. You can download the source file for `gpsxhydromantiscrack` from As far as the limitations of the current version goes, in the next version, we're planning to release the source code for all the packages, so this doesn't really apply anymore. Note: I'm not affiliated with the `gpsx` project in any way. I just want to help people and I see this as a kind gesture. Sorry for the delay in responding, I was waiting for an email I received from `gpsxproject`. I guess we
