Good Vibes Volume 4 by Matt Furgeson (Adobe Audition and Photoshop) : 11. Upgrade and upgrade all my NI (Kontakt, Omnisphere, etc) libraries to the latest free version. IBM's Watson Chills Out Deep Learning Tools and Closes the AI Gap - brennannovak ====== aurelian What I find most interesting is that for all the hype around AI, virtually none of the common applications have been built from scratch using only deep/probabilistic learning techniques. For example, word embeddings and their applications are prime examples. ImageNet, sequence tagging (aka NLP), maybe a couple of other applications come to mind. The reason why this doesn't happen is that the application domain makes use of a technique, at least by the AI researcher community, but is well-known in the research community as being non-optimal (e.g. word embeddings, sequence tagging). The text for comparison would be "actually build a deep learning system for every application domain". ------ splittingTimes The problem is these people are trying to make AI general intelligence. Most people are content to automate mundane tasks. Let's be honest, who wants a personal assistant or an even better self-driving car? If that's your main goal, you are going to do something different. I think the real applications of AI is going to come in in medicine, security, and finance. I see the real possibility of machines becoming _better_ than humans at these tasks. In finance, I think they will go directly from hacking debt market into the derivatives market. Imagine a system exploiting margin calls against poor traders. It will be brilliant at it. I don't know about the rest, but right now I don't expect a robot to be able to do what a human can do, barring the computers remaining better at calculation and memory, and not all of them are. ~~~ minimaxir > I think the real applications of AI is going to come in in medicine

In which countries other than Russia did the Soviet Union make films? Where did the film industry of the Soviet Union belong? Did the USSR make all of their films in Russia? Was the cine film industry in the Soviet Union entirely Russian? A: Without delving into the details of the "Soviet" film industry - can we say that the Soviet Union made only Russian movies - well, that would be a lie. According to The Soviet Film Industry in the Popular Encyclopedia (Советская фильмография в популярной энциклопедии, 1926-1991), there were produced more than 6000 Soviet movies before the USSR dissolved. Here is the breakdown, Ukraine - 220 Byelorussia - 1125 Ukraine - 450 Kazakhstan - 75 Kyrgyzstan - 40 Other republics - 6
