which I currently live, lives in the rural area around a small town called Bastrop. Bastrop borders Washington and Comal counties and is about 50 miles southeast of Austin. The town is famous for its local pottery, but it is also home to an interesting and vibrant art scene. There are three art galleries in the town. There is the Arts Factory, Decorado Gallery and The Kondo Center. The Decorado Gallery is the larger of the three. The Arts Factory and Kondo Center are smaller galleries. The Arts Factory, or "Asquishas Arts Factory", was founded in 1987 and is located at 431 Main Street in downtown Bastrop. It specializes in ceramics, jewelry, fiber arts, painting, photography, as well as clothing, ceramics, woodworking and jewelry. The Kondo Center, or "Kondo" is a "galleridge" (ha!). They only have 2 artists represented, and they specialize in wood burning. The Kondo Center is located at 1210 North 1st Street. The Decorado Gallery is located at 12 South 1st Street. The Decorado Gallery has several unique features. One is a sit-down picnic area, which overlooks the gallery's two outdoor courtyards, both of which are available for classes and parties. The Decorado Gallery The second unique feature is the Decorado Gallery's first floor walk-through art gallery, a colorful, eclectic space that has the visual impact of a country art gallery. The Decorado Gallery recently organized a gallery walk-through in May, which was an incredibly interesting event. It was a great opportunity to see the space, learn about the varied art and artistic tastes of the artists, and see what's currently on view for purchase. I also met several of the artists in the Decorado Gallery, which was fun. The Kondo Center Both the Decorado and Arts Factory galleries have been featured in local newspapers, particularly the Austin American-Statesman, for quite a while now. I was happy to see my painting "Wonderland" featured on their cover last fall. It was very fun to watch my painting on the cover of the paper in my own home town. One of the artists who is featured in the gallery walk-through is Rick Wightman. His paintings may be familiar to some. He was one of the artists I interviewed for my blog, The Art of Dining: The Art of Subcellular localization of human creatine transporter. Creatine is the most important endogenous source of energy for mammalian cells. Creatine is transported into the cells by a high-affinity transport system. Human creatine transporter (hCTr1) is a 78 kDa plasma membrane protein encoded by the SLC6A8 gene. Here, we examined the subcellular distribution of hCTr1 in Chinese hamster ovary (CHO) cells using various cell fractionation and immunocytochemical analyses. The results showed that hCTr1 was distributed both in the plasma membrane and mitochondria. An association of hCTr1 with the plasma membrane was further supported by a close correlation between the plasma membrane localization of hCTr1 and the distribution of Na+/K+ ATPase. Consistent with the previous finding in CHO cells, hCTr1 was also localized in mitochondria in various cell types. Moreover, the whole-cell [14C]creatine uptake activity was significantly inhibited by sodium azide and carbonyl cyanide m-chlorophenylhydrazone, suggesting that hCTr1 is associated with the plasma membrane, mitochondria, and, possibly, the endoplasmic reticulum. These results suggest that, in human cells, hCTr1 may be involved in cellular energy metabolism at the mitochondrial, plasma membrane, and/or endoplasmic reticulum sites.Q: How can I test an ASP.NET MVC Razor View that contains a LINQ Join I have an ASP.NET MVC Razor View (in the Views\MyViews\MyView.cshtml file) that has the following code: @model Model.MyViewModel @{ var a = Model.A.ToList(); var b = Model.B.ToList(); } I have a class called MyViewModel that has a property named A of type List of object.
