What Is Kundan And How Kundan Jewellery Necklace Set Is Made?

Kundan is considered the oldest and most stunning gemstone that was brought to India by Mughals and was seen in the royal courts of north Delhi. It is an expensive gemstone because the process of carving kundan and then bejewelling it in the designs is challenging. The task is arduous even for the most skilled labourers to finish one Kundan Jewellery Necklace Set.

This intricate process involves a lot of people working on the same piece. This entire procedure starts with the skeletal framework, paadh process, khudai, enamelling, pakai and in the end chillai process where the gemstones are polished.
